Four Greeks, Two Independents Stumping for Campus Positions

Central Board Session To Validate Petitions, But Work May Be In Vain

A harried Central board meets in the Eloise Knowles room at 4 o'clock today to validate petitions for class and ASMSU offices—and its work may be for naught.

The board must decide if the publication of candidates' names in the Missoulian Friday morning was premature. If it was, the entire validating procedure will be thrown out of gear.

The University News service released the names after the closing filing date—4 p.m. Thursday.

According to section six, article seven of the constitution, names of the candidates shall be kept secret until the closing filing date. Publication of the names in the Missoulian would not interfere with this stipulation.

But the constitution goes on to say that Central board shall validate the petitions the closing filing date, and the date of publication. Since the closing date was last Thursday, and Central board meets only today, publication in the Missoulian Friday morning apparently violates this provision.

A further complication came to light Friday when it was pointed out that the Kaimin had prematurely published a list of the Pan-Hel candidates.

There is little information in the constitution to guide Central board out of its dilemma if it now rules the petitions invalid because of premature publication.

The saving point is that the board is authorized to pass on constitutional matters. It may choose (please see page three)

The second annual Spotlight ball, Montana Masquer social function, will be held next Saturday evening, April 16, in the Florentine gardens.

Tickets, at $1.20 per couple, may be purchased this week in the Student Union lower hall, or from any Masquer member.

Hank Ford, Ross Miller Get ISA Nod to Battle Greek Political Slate

Four Greeks and two Independents will fight it out for ASMSU's two major political offices in the Aber primaries. The winning two in each division will face each other in the general election.

Henry Ford, John Holding, and Bob Stermitz have filed for ASMSU president, and Dave Freeman, Dean Jellison, and Ross Miller will compete for the business managership.

The status of these candidates, and of others who filed prior to the deadline last Thursday, is in doubt until Central board determines today if validating can go ahead as planned.

Hank Ford

Henry (Hank) Ford, a junior in accounting from Durango, Colo., is well known on the football field and in the M-club. The husky athlete is finishing his third year of play, and will be graduated a year from June. He served in the navy for a year and a half.

John Holding

John Holding, 24-year-old Missoula football ace, has been active in student affairs since '46. The former Air Force lieutenant has been a Bear Paw, member of Central board, M-club president, and '48 Aber day manager. He is also a member of Silent Sentinel, senior men's honorary. He is a biology-education major, and a member of Sigma Chi fraternity.

Bob Stermitz

Bob Stermitz, Casper, Wyo., is a former president of Interfraternity council and Phi Delta Theta fraternity. He is 22, a forestry major, and served in the Navy as an electronics technician's mate.

ASMSU business manager candidates are well known for their activities in several fields.

Dave Freeman

Dave Freeman, 21-year-old junior from Missoula, has been active at the University since his freshman year. He was sophomore delegate to Central board, junior delegate the next year (the position he now holds), chairman of the '48 Aber elections, chairman of the '47 Green day program, former member of Bear Paw, and member now of Scabbard and Blade. He is a chemistry major, and a member of Sigma Nu fraternity.

Dean Jellison

Dean Jellison, 20, is the youngest of the six candidates, but he has much extracurricular experience behind him. He is one of the four debaters who will attend the national collegiate debates at West Point. Jellison is from Kalispell, a political science major, and a member of Theta Chi fraternity. He served for two years on the convocations and outside entertainment committees, was production manager for the Miss Montana pageant, a Bear Paw, and member of Tau Kappa Alpha, forensic honorary.

Ross Miller

Ross Miller, the ISA candidate, has also been a busy young man during his undergraduate career. The 26-year-old journalism major has been publicity director for the athletic department for the past year, member of Radio guild, member of SDX, men's journalism honorary. Miller is from Great Falls, and served more than four years with the Air force after he enlisted during his senior year in high school. He is married, has a small daughter, and resides in the strip house area.

Fire Destroys Lumber Near New Building

Fire destroyed a large pile of scrap lumber south of the new business administration building yesterday afternoon.

Paul Swallow, foreman for Pew construction, said he first noticed the fire when one of the workers called his attention to the rapidly spreading blaze.

Swallow said he moved about 1500 feet of lumber after water had cooled the east edge of the blaze. Damage was said to be slight but the lumber had been promised to strip house residents for fuel.

When asked the cause of the fire, Swallow said he had been told by workmen that several young men had been standing near the fire when it apparently started. The construction foreman said that if the fire had been started as a prank it was a foolish one and that he intended to take further precautions against future fires.

He said that a similar fire on the north side of the building might have done serious damage to construction materials.

ISA Backs These Candidates . . .

Ross Miller and Hank Ford hope to be the first Independent team to win top honors in ASMSU political races in recent years. The two men are backed by the Independent Student association, the national non-affiliate organization which replaced the old OIS.

. . . And the Greeks Are Boosting These

These men will carry the banners of the Greek letter fraternities into the Aber Day primary elections for ASMSU political offices. They are Dave Freeman, Sigma Nu, candidate for ASMSU business manager; John Holding, Sigma Chi, presidential office seeker; Dean Jellison, Theta Chi, business manager candidate; and Robert Stermitz, Phi Delta Theta, the second Greek presidential hopeful. The Greek slate is bolstered by numerous aspirants for the secondary political positions waiting to be filled following the Aber primaries.

According to the ASMSU constitution, the petitions of all the candidates, Greek and ISA alike, may be invalid because the constitution specifically states that the names of the candidates cannot be published before Central board has okayed the petitions. The names of all candidates seeking offices were published before Central board got around to their chore.

Were We Scooped?

The Kaimin did not fail to print the names of ASMSU and Class candidates on Friday because your student paper was less efficient than the Missoulian. In judging matters of this kind you should first of all rule out impossibilities.

What happened was this: As the lead story on this page will show, an editor who tries to adhere rigidly to Section 6, Article VII of the student constitution binds himself so tightly that he can't print any pre-election news in good conscience.

That is just what happened to us. That interesting sentence in the constitution that directs Central Board to validate the petitions between the closing filing date and the date of publication was clear enough—or so we thought—to indicate that the Kaimin should not publish the names involved until the petitions were validated.

We rather looked on this as something we owed Central Board, a rather annoying duty that it was best not to evade.

But Thursday night the News service quite innocently got the names of the candidates, and innocently turned them over to the Missoulian, and the Missoulian just as innocently printed them.

There was no skulduggery in any of this, to be sure. We felicitate the Missoulian on the unwonted and hitherto unsuspected vigor of its news-gathering machine, but we rather suspect that the validation proceedings are now way up in the air; indeed, up in the air and . . . if Central Board will pardon the (please see page four)

Bo Brown Accepts Bid To Cleveland Playhouse; Masquer Royale Award

Bo Brown, probably one of the best student actors MSU ever produced, received the reward for his labors last week when he was notified that he would be admitted to the Cleveland playhouse this September.

Brown will work with a select company of about 35 collegiate players who will train under a famous dramatics faculty at the equally famous school of the theater.

MSU Career Ends

Thus comes to an end a Montana career that began in 1946, when, as a navy veteran transfer student from Florida, Brown rehearsed a part in the Masquer production of "Hamlet."

He was taken ill and never appeared, but the following school year he appeared as Robert Browning in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," and has either starred or played fat roles in Masquer productions ever since.

He first revealed the professional touch that eventually won him the Cleveland appointment in the summer of 1947, when he starred in Bernard Shaw's, "Simpleton of Unexpected Isles."

The students first recognized him as a player of unusual ability when he stimulated them with his strong handling of Renfield in "Dracula," LeRoy Hinz's first production at the University.

He probably reached his peak in the Irish satire, "Playboy of the Western World," given last year. Though the play was difficult and called for a truly professional cast, the Masquers, well led by Brown, sailed effortlessly through.

The following summer he played a riotously funny medical student in "The Man Who Would Be Sick," and climaxed his dramatic leads as Mio in "Winterset" last quarter.

Volpone His Last

Brown ended his career here Saturday night when "Volpone" closed after a five-night run. He starred in this, his last vehicle.

Besides his spartan labors in these plays, Brown has appeared in several light one-act plays, was business and publicity director for the Desert Song (and will perform this function for the "Alice in Wonderland" show now rehearsing), served last year as business manager for the Kaimin and is an active member of Silent Sentinel.

His greatest student reward came Saturday when the Masquers Royale, honorary dramatics society for students who have distinguished themselves in drama here, entered him on their rolls.

Brown will be a very busy man at Cleveland. The Playhouse runs three theaters in Cleveland right through the year, and plays 10 productions in 10 months. The 25-year-old school of drama employs some of the most competent dramatics teachers in the nation.

Editorial

allusion . . . INVALID.

Mr. James Lucas, that peerless watchdog of the student interests, is in the news again. Mr. Lucas, you will recall, was the devoted public servant who set out Friday to prove that the editor of the Kaimin was incompetent.

These hard words might have pained us considerably, were it not that Big Jim isn't exactly an efficiency expert himself.

In the labored defense of his good name, printed in Friday's Kaimin, MSU's talking cash-box gave a heated and very convincing defense of somebody . . . just who we don't know, but that somebody wasn't Jim Lucas.

It is characteristic of Jim that he confuses what he thinks he is with what he is.

For example, he fancies that he is so concerned with how the student gold is spent that the ASMSU auditor is constantly informed by him on this weighty matter.

Now what actually is the case, of course, is that at the last board meeting the auditor hadn't even talked to Lucas about all those "thousands" Jim talks about so glibly. The appropriations for Aber day and the traveling expenses for the debaters were not covered by a specific fund in the student treasury. Lucas and the auditor just weren't talking about the same thing. Lucas apparently didn't talk to the auditor at all, to be rather frank.

Mr. Lucas then decided that the Kaimin was in gross error when it said the two appropriations were made on a fund which was unable to cover them. But the Kaimin statement was true, as the auditor himself stated . . . in fact he was quoted to that effect. No one said ASMSU didn't have money. We said the money could not come from where Lucas apparently intended it to come. He may have known what he was talking about, but here are some who didn't: Mr. Briggs, Dean Wunderlich, Jim Mueller, Bill Anderson, et al.

No, Jim, it just isn't good enough. You can't talk your way out of this one, anymore than you can talk your way around the free-referendum botch.

To save you future embarrassment of this kind, you will recall that the editor made an appointment with you for 2:30 Sunday . . . using time that he didn't have so that the students would be better informed about the need for the higher fee. That the editor took his private time to take care of this piece of student business only shows how truly incompetent he is, of course, but nobody can accuse you of that.

You were on a picnic when the editor called.—JWS.

Letters . . . to the Editor

Dear Editor,

That picture of the firefighters in Friday's Kaimin is posed. Why label it as an action shot? If any chemicals were being poured on anything, the extinguishers would be the other end up.

Now that I have thrown my stone, may I congratulate you on putting out such an interesting paper. At least it gets read.

R. K. MacDonald

P. S.: I just now turned the page and saw that Wicks beat me to it. Must run in the family.

(We took the photo on faith, R. K., and still do. Thanks for those few kind words. What a novelty!—Ed.)
